Course title:	European Union – Between Integration and Crisis
Track:	B-Track
Language of instruction:	English
Contact hours:	72 (6 per day)
ECTS-Credits:	6

Course description

The course will introduce the basic principles of the European Union and describe the processes of widening and deepening of this unique political entity. At the beginning, we will review the genesis of the world's only supranational organization that led to cooperation between member states and a peaceful development on the continent unseen in previous centuries. As the European Union is defined and perceived largely through the prism of its institutions, we will examine their role in pushing the process of the integration forward.

Since EU policies are the frame of its institutions, we will discuss in more detail the historical development and current status of EU policy in various fields, including foreign and security affairs, immigration, climate and energy, and economic and monetary policy. The analysis will entail a discussion of foreign policy cases like Libya and Syria, but also the Ukraine, and in particular of the policy scheme regarding the ongoing mass migration. Furthermore, Europe's response strategy to tackle the bank and state crisis in face of its threat to the social standards in Europe (e.g. Greece) will be addressed. In this context, we will also discuss possible learning effects in the aftermath of the economic crisis and the question if it is only a matter of time before such a crisis happens again. Moreover, the European climate and energy policy will be critically reviewed. We will study the consequences of the climate agreement from Paris for the EU member states and look into the repercussions for the energy sector.

Having determined the factors contributing to the deepening of the EU through its institutions, we will discuss the factors which determine the willingness of different countries to join the EU and thus to contribute to its widening. In this regard, we will examine Europe's role as an international actor with a special focus on the European role towards its Eastern and Southern neighbours and the major global powers (US, China, Russia, Turkey). Finally, we will review the EU enlargement process and the prospects for the future development of the European Union and the challenges it is facing in a rapidly changing and complex world.

Student profile

Students from different countries, academic levels and backgrounds who are generally interested in European integration will benefit from each other in an intercultural and interdisciplinary learning process. The course does not require special knowledge about European politics, law, history or culture, but participants should be interested in more than just their field of specialization.
