

Peter Rosenbaum
(PhD, NYU, Fall 2004)

is currently Lecturer of German at E. S. University of Pennsylvania. From 2000-2002 he held a fellowship at the Remarque Institute in New York where he coordinated the Remarque Forum, an international think-tank facilitating contacts between Europeans and North Americans. In addition to 20th - to 21st -century literature and aesthetics, his research is centered on the history of commemorative traditions. Publications include “The Buchenwald Memorial and Its Différend” (Why Weimar?: Questioning the Legacy of Weimar from Goethe to 1999. 2003), “Wiederholungszwang und Demokratieverständnis: Zum US-amerikanischen Deutschlandbild“ (Zusammenleben mit Nachbarn: Sprachliche, psychische und soziale Probleme im Dreiländereck. 2001), and articles on contemporary German authors. He has taught classes on Modernism, Representations of the Holocaust in Literature and Film, and Post-1945 German Literature and Politics.